Report of Superintendent

To the School Board and Citizens of Shelburne:

Herewith is presented my first annual report.

Attendance Statistics for 1919-1920

	Village School	Peabody School
1. Aggregate half-days attendance.....	4,781	4,526
2. Aggregate half-days absence.....	495	554
3. Percent of attendance.....	93	89
4. Number of tardinesses.. ..	19	90
5. Number of visits by superintendent....	14	15
6. Number of visits by members of School Board... ..	3	1
7. Number of visits by parents and others	15	27
8. Average membership.....	15	15.11

Condition of School Buildings

We can often judge the quantity and quality of community spirit by looking over the churches, libraries and schools of that particular community. If the churches are strong in attendance, the buildings well kept; the library well stocked with selected books; the school houses and grounds neat and orderly, equipped with modern appliances and furniture, we are very apt to say that this must be a town where community spirit exists, and that it must be a place very desirable to settle in.

Both of the Shelburne schools are in very fair shape but much remains to be done. The jacketed stove in the village school is working very satisfactorily, but the stove in the Peabody school does not heat the building as it should. The advantage of a jacketed stove is that it distributes the heat uniformly over the entire room.

The Joint Committee on Health Problems in Education of the National Council of the National Education Association has formulated ten sanitary commandments for rural schools.

“In every school which may be considered passably sanitary, the following conditions shall obtain:

1. Heating by at least a properly jacketed stove. (No unjacketed stove to be allowed). Avoid overheating. Temperature should never go above 68 degrees F. There should be a thermometer in every school room. Ventilation by open windows when weather permits and by opening of windows at frequent intervals even in winter.

2. Lighting from left side of room, (or from left and rear), through window space at least one-fifth of floor space, in area.

3. Cleanliness of school as good as in the home of a careful housekeeper.

4. Furniture sanitary in kind, and easily and frequently cleaned. Seats and desks adjustable and hygienic in type.

5. Drinking water from a pure source provided by a sanitary drinking fountain.

6. Facilities for washing hands, and individual towels.

7. Toilets and privies sanitary in type and in care, (with no cesspools unless water tight) and no neglected privy boxes or vaults.

8. Flies and mosquitoes excluded by thorough screening of school house and toilets.

9. Obscene and defacing marks absolutely absent from school house and privies.

10. Playground of adequate size for every rural school.”

The Fundamental Subjects

By the fundamental subjects we mean reading, writing, arithmetic and spelling, and it is with these subjects that the schools of Shelburne are primarily concerned. It is the duty of the schools to teach these subjects well. The child at the end of the sixth year ought to be able to read with considerable fluency and understanding, to write a rapid legible hand, and to be able to spell the words that are most common in the English language. The simple processes of arithmetic should be thoroughly grasped. The business world demands accuracy and speed in the simple processes. This accuracy and facility can only come through drill and repetition which is given in school. Many of our teachers have been so imbued with the idea of interesting the child that they have forgotten the basic principle of why schools exist.

Charles Elmer Holley in an article in the Educational Review states that during the war when the enlisted men at Camp Hancock were divided into groups, those coming from Wisconsin, New York and Massachusetts thirty to forty percent were placed in the poorly schooled group and from those coming from North Carolina, Alabama and Louisiana the percentage in the poorly schooled group ran from seventy to ninety. The men in this poorly schooled group consisted of those who could not read or write well enough to use these accomplishments as "tools." They were not able to read with intelligence, directions or instructions, and were not able to write letters that could be easily read.

The superintendent is now conducting a series of tests in spelling, arithmetic and reading in order to ascertain definitely where our schools stand in these all important school subjects. After the facts are obtained, he hopes to be able to prescribe adequate medicine. The following samples were obtained from pupils in the eighth grade in the district:—

1. I shall sincerely asprune a permlary receipt.

2. I shall cencerly appercate a preliminary receipt.

3. I shall sincerly appraction a preliment receipt.

The first sentence was written by a boy, and the last two were written by girls. The sentence dictated by the teacher was "I shall sincerely appreciate a preliminary receipt." The sentence is one that any business man might use and one which a grammar school graduate ought to write correctly. Much attention needs to be given to the subject of spelling. In arithmetic we have found pupils that still have to count on their fingers in order to do simple sums. These pupils were in the fifth and sixth grades in the district.

The State Course of Study provides minimum standards for the first three grades. They must be reached by all schools but good schools will do more than is here outlined. I am giving below the minimum standards in reading:—

GRADE I.

(a) Ability to read from the board sentences composed of common words, in the normal vocabulary of children.

(b) Ability as a result of word drills to recognize instantly simple words and combinations of words.

(c) The realization on the part of children that books contain interesting stories and are worth reading.

(d) The reading in class of six to eight primers, first readers and children's classics.

(e) Ability to read at sight and understandingly any easy first reader.

GRADE II.

(a) The continuation of A, B, C of Grade I.

(b) The reading in class of six to eight first and second readers and children's classics.

(c) The reading out of class of eight to ten books of grade of first and second readers.

(d) The reading at sight readily and with understanding of any ordinary second reader.

GRADE III.

(a) The continuation of C of Grade I.
(b) Recognition of letter combinations or syllables of ordinary words.

(c) The reading in class of eight to ten books of grade of ordinary second and third readers and children's classics.

(d) The reading out of class of eight to ten books of same grade.

(e) The ability to read orally or silently at sight, readily and with understanding, from any ordinary third reader.

(f) The ability to read silently at rate of 2.2 words per second and to reproduce 40 percent of the ideas.

The minimum standards in other subjects may be obtained by consulting teachers or superintendent.

Conclusion

In conclusion I wish to express my appreciation of the co-operation of school board and parents which I have received.

Respectfully submitted,

CHAS. W. WALKER,

Supt. of Schools.
